

What The United States Flag Stand For

I am the United States Flag. I stand for peace, freedom, and the American spirit. I can strike fear into hearts and bring tears to the eyes of any proud American. I wave proud and true over the land of liberty. I stand for truth, justice and the American way of life.

I am the undeniable symbol of American freedom. I have flown over battlefields that have left me torn and tattered. I have been seen through the smoke and given hope to weary soldiers who have fought to maintain this country's freedom. I have seen a civil war waged at home, but remain the symbol to which we still cover our hearts today.

I stand for strength in our government and our military as I fly proudly over our monuments, courts, and schools. I have been saluted by eager troops going to battle, and again as those same soldiers watch me pass lying on the coffins of the brothers who won't make it home. I hang on the front porch of many patriotic Americans, and on the walls of widow's whose spouse has served me. I create a sad and solemn field of color over the final resting place of the thousands of American soldiers who bravely and willingly gave their lives for our freedom.

I am the United States Flag. I stand for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. I am the quintessential symbol of what our country stands for. I am raised each day to fly proud and strong, and lowered to half-mast to pay humble tribute when tragedy or loss strikes. I stand for the hopes and dreams of those who seek shelter in our great country. I have the ability to bring cheers, tears, smiles and goose bumps to those who proudly gaze upon my stars and stripes. Whether you call me Old Glory or just old red, white, and blue, I AM the flag of the United States of America. I stand for pride. I stand for liberty. I stand for freedom.
