

What My Vote Will Mean To Me

What does having the privilege to vote mean to me? Voting to me is a way of expressing my opinion about decisions that need to be made. One of the biggest decisions that we have in our country is who will be our leaders. Having the right to vote comes with the responsibility to be informed about who will make the best leaders and do the best job to improve our country. Voting gives me an opportunity for my voice to be heard along with other citizens of our country.

Voting has not always been available to everyone. Back in history women were not allowed to vote; only men could vote. One day when I am old enough I will be able to vote as a woman because people fought for that right for me and all women. That means a lot to me. When I am old enough to vote, it will be my responsibility to be informed about the candidates to decide who would be the best one to represent our country. This is a fair way to pick the best leadership we can. Being old enough to vote also means that I should be mature enough to support the leaders who are chosen even if I did not vote for them.

I am looking forward to the day when I have the chance to vote. I know when I vote my voice will be heard. I will be given the same chance as anyone else to express my opinions through my vote. I will be honored and blessed to one day exercise my right to vote.
